Effects of adenosine receptor agonists on the outflow of aqueous humor from the eye. In rabbit eyes perfused in situ with physiological saline, 1-N6-phenylisopropyladenosine (L-PIA) and two of its analogues, d-PIA and 2-p-(2-carboxyethyl)phenethylamino-5'-N-ethylcarboxamidoadenosine (CGS-21680), were found to increase both flow and outflow. The increase in flow induced by CGS-21680 was dependent on the concentration in the perfusate. The net influx of Na⁺ was enhanced only at 10⁽⁻⁴⁾ M CGS-21680. The magnitude of the increase of outflow induced by CGS-21680 and its analogues did not correlate with the increase in osmolar clearance rate, indicating that the increase of outflow induced by these compounds was due to changes in the ocular microcirculation rather than a change in tonicity of the aqueous humor. These findings suggest that adenosine receptor agonists may modulate aqueous outflow. Q: How to set a project reference when it doesn't show up on the Project References window I have a project that I want to deploy to an intranet. I've pulled it down into my local computer and want to set it up to use some intranet projects. When I right click on the project and select Add > References, I don't see the projects listed in the drop down. I have both my project and the other project on the same network, both as default folders. I've tried adding them manually as well. A: The way I usually handle this is to clone the project that I want to use to my local machine. This forces the reference to update in the solution and most of the time that is all that is needed.
