discussion of topics of common interest.Here in Canada they don't just make movie trailers that are way longer than normal, they make movie trailers that are made up of four different segments. One segment is a full-length mini-movie, one is a short little story, one is a highly edited montage of the characters, and one is just a tease. Each of those can then be "plopped" back-to-back, allowing for a seamless transition from one to the next. It's the kind of thing that really makes people go "WOW!" as they see your movie trailer. It wasn't a totally original idea. In fact, the first time I saw anyone else do a four-part trailer, they probably stole most of it from this video that was posted on YouTube back in the mid-2000s. My friend Kevin Smith did a fun little version back in the mid-2000s as well.

But as someone in the industry I didn't know how to do a version like that. So I decided to give it a shot. The idea is pretty simple. One minute, two minutes, three minutes, four minutes (or however much). Each time the trailer gets a little longer. In my version I'm actually showing the movie. But I'm doing a lot more of the editing, so I'm only including a bit of the movie while showing a bit of all the other stuff. It's a clever way to
